hehe so! I almost died today

I was in the car driving home from my softball tournament. Then my dad's car battery died in the middle of the highway when we were going at 60 mph. The car behind us slammed on their brakes and skidded to a stop about a foot behind us. So yeah. I'm really freaked out right now and jumpy around everything.

Oh dear-- that sounds really scary. I remember after I got in a car accident I was really nervous about being in a car for a few weeks. I started watching the road even if other people were driving, and it's a habit I carry with me to this day. I'm glad nothing bad happened, you've got enough on your plate already.

I know the feeling as well when almost getting into a crash. I'm glad that you're safe though.

That was actually only half the post. Phil cut it out. So after the car behind us stopped, the car to the right of us mad a sudden turn while stopping and rammed into my side. My whole right side of me is bruised but otherwise I'm fine.

Wait were you physically hit by a car or did the car hit your car? Did you guys stop moving after the battery died?

I've never heard of a car completely stopping because of a battery dying, that's really interesting. I guess that's possible if your dad changed it to too high a gear while he was driving while it was dead but you don't usually change gears on the highway. Maybe there was another issue? Batteries don't control the whole engine, only electronic stuff like lights, AC, and the radio. Maybe there was an underlying issue, because that's real funky. Is everyone else okay, too? I hope your car didn't get totaled but getting T-boned like that just might do it in.

HEHE you not the only one. I nearly got bitten by a very poisonous snake because I didn't see it. I was out of there as soon as I saw it, knowing it was the one and only... cottonmouth

...Also, why would the car on the right stop? It wouldn't really affect them, unless your car stopped and turned slightly, getting in the way, in the process.

@Galaxian: It snowed about 8 inches. But the car next to us obviously didn't know how to drive in the snow. It kept sliding.
